From Hollywood comes news that Bing Crosby is having his troubles. Having engaged his brother Bob and vivacious Mary Martin to carry on for him while he vacations (Kraft Music Hall—Thursday at 7:00 p.m.) his next problem is where to go. But where he may go, Bing has decided where his four growing sons are going for the summer. They will be dispatched to four different summer camps. Says Bing, "My quartet of wild Indians would ruin any one camp so I have decided to divide the headaches, and give our locations a bad break."

Regular listeners to the Kraft Music Hall will be interested in Victor Borge's unusual escape to America, just a few hours ahead of the German Gestapo. Much

YOUNKER—FORD
Two old families of the Irma district were united when Doris, youngest daughter of Mr. Frank Ford and the late Mrs. Ford, and Fred, eldest son of Mrs. Younker and the late Mr. George Younker, were married at the Ford home on June 24. The Rev. E. Longmire officiated at the simple yet beautiful ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her father, entered to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. Longmire, and looked really lovely in rose crepe with rose accessories and carried a bouquet of carnations.

Miss Hazel Younker was a charming bridesmaid in a blue sheer ensemble with white accessories and carried a bouquet of peonies. Mr. George Ford was a capable best man.

About thirty-eight guests sat down to a delicious wedding supper centred by a three-tier wedding cake. Supper over, the happy couple left by car for Edmonton, after which they will make their home on the groom's farm north of Irma.

Among those present were the Younger family; Mr. and Mrs. S. Thomson; Mrs. J. Thomson; Mrs. M. New; Mrs. W. Goodwin; Mrs. Whitely and Florence; Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Oldham; Mr. H. Oldham; Mrs. A. Cook and Margery and Betsy McKean. Out of town guests included Miss Jane Younger of Edmonton, and Mr. Sheick, Cranbrook, B.C.

The doings start with a calithumpian parade at one o'clock when decorated floats from business firms and others will join with the cowboys on horse back in starting off the day right. Decorated cars and floats from other towns are invited to take part in

The stampeede events have been well lined up by the manager, O. Olsenberg, and from all accounts well known riders will be present to take part in the roundup. Other attractions are horse races, bicycle races, chariot races, foot races, and athletic events of all kinds. The day will wind up with a big dance, for which two large halls are available if necessary.

The entire proceeds, after expenses are paid will go towards the Red Cross. In case of rain on the 15th, the stampede will be held on the 16th.

Thinking and Acting

Much has been written of the difficulty of collaboration between people who are not "like minded" and the necessity of creating a "psychology of co-operation." But neither "likemindedness" nor a "psychology of co-operation." But fixed attributes.

People become like-minded by doing things together and by sharing the same experiences; and the way to create a psychology of co-operation is not to preach co-operation but to co-operate.

As farmers acting independently we cannot get to first base, but united into one organization we can ask for and obtain our full share of reasonable and just de-

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Shadwell in the late afternoon lay in shadows cast by the magnificent old trees. The men standing about in groups talked and smoked and watched the house. In the lane stood Todd's coupe, Tamar's sedan and several other cars, some with the patrol emblem on the sides. A message had arrived the men knew to tell the reporters avidly hoped to talk with one of the three men in conference in the drawing room.

"We'll be asked to withdraw, to facilitate the payment of the ransom," ventured one of the State troopers. "Whoever did this job is sick enough to make certain that he won't get caught."

"Randolph won't find it easy to raise a fortune for his daughter's release. Those stolen gold bricks put a damper on that," suggested another.

"That won't make much difference. He can get any amount. He could even sell his interest in the Cricket Hill for enough to pay it."

"Have you ever seen the girl?"

The younger man nodded. "Yes. I grew up in Tahlshneka. Tamar and I used to go to the same Sunday-school. A beautiful girl, with enough vitality and charm to knock 'em cold. Every one of us more than 16 and under 60 were in love with her."

He lit another cigarette, stepping on the stub of the old and edging it off the drive with the toe of his polished boot. Somehow it seemed sacrilegious to mar even the outdoors of Shadwell with a cigarette stub.

One of the men pointed suddenly across the terrace and over into the meadows on the east. "What in the world?"

A wagon, followed by half a dozen Negro children and two or three men was going slowly over the old track leading to the stables.

"It's the mare that was killed. They are going to bury her in the plot they've used for their horses. Look, see to the right, there's a tall shaft to Tahlshneka's. My father saw him win the derby three years in succession and said that he was the greatest race horse of all times. Tamar's mare was a pretty little thing called Madcap. I understand that she broke her leg and had to be shot."

"Some connection between the mare and the abduction and the missing gold, if I know what I think. Look!" The wagon had gone past the stables and turned out again into their vision.

The boys gathered around, and across the lawn and meadows came their weird chant.

The screen of the big front door slammed and Taylor came out hurriedly. He spoke briefly to the police in charge near the house and got into his car. One of the newspaper men edged toward the door.

In the drawing room Ranny and Knox Randolph were deep in thought. Ranny still had the message clutched in his hand. It was a telegram and had been sent an hour before from Atlanta.

Taylor had already investigated the source of the wire, but the operator had not noticed anything out of the ordinary about the message and had therefore not paid any particular attention to the way he had received it. He only knew that it had been called in from a downtown hotel. Police were already investigating the clues they might find there. So far they had only waited to hear more.

The message was brief: "Meet me alone Duck Point Junction for instructions and identification note eleven tonight." It was addressed to Knox Randolph, Shadwell, Tahlshneka, and signed Louie.

Taylor had clerks going through files checking on the Louies in the records. They ranged through a large group of aliens with citizenship papers down to Americans with doubtful aliases, astonishingly many.

"I'll go, Mr. Randolph. I think that it would be better for me to go than for you to make the trip that time of night and meeting a desperate gangster."

"No, Ranny. I must follow the instructions out to the letter. I'll do nothing to cause them any reason for not returning Tamar safely."

Phoebe entered the room softly tapping across the floor on her loose shoes. "De reprohats wants to know if dey kin see you?"

"No, Phoebe. Please tell them. We have nothing further to say at this time." As she left the room, Knox turned to Ranny with a hopeless gesture. "This uncertainty is terrible. I could get the ransom tonight, but instead I have to wait for instructions that may take days to carry out. We'll have to get the co-operation of the police on this. No one else must follow me tonight when I leave. But you must go along the highway after me, to make sure of that."

The evening's dread monotony was broken by Phoebe demanding them to come to the breakfast room and eat some supper. Ranny tried to choke the food down for Knox's sake. It was like sawdust to him, as he wondered if Tamar were hungry or cold. He remembered well the green sweater and the corduroy slacks Phoebe had told him she wore away. Inside his coat pocket he carried the little gold ring that he had found where the plane had taken off that had taken her away.

After they had eaten, Dick Sheridan and his father came to see if there had been any further information or if there were anything that they could do.

"We've not had a chance to find out about Christopher Sande's whereabouts," Ranny said as they settled down in the drawing room once more.

"Sally said that he had flown east for a couple of days and was coming out to Pinecrest tonight. I think that there's absolutely no connection with his leaving and all of this."

Ranny dug his flat deep into his trouser pocket. "I wish that I didn't think so. But there must be somebody pretty badly back of this. I honestly don't believe Major Towne had anything to do with the kidnapping. He simply was bewildered about the airplane."

"He acted as though the airplane might have been there waiting for the gold bricks to be flown to some safe cache. If that is so, what became of them? It seems to me that whoever took Tamar, decided that it might be more profitable than the gold."

Dick went back out to his car to bring in the evening papers. Almost the whole of the front page was covered with the story. It had the war news and the international stories crowded into inconspicuous places with small headlines. Ranny and Dick read carefully part of it.

The fact that a message had been received was there, but no mention of the contents of it had been revealed. Everything seemed suspended waiting for the next movement which was unknown to both the police and the public.

At 9 o'clock several of the reporters left and the police asked Mr. Randolph his desires concerning the guarding the place. One man was left, and the others sent away. Ranny sat conveniently by the telephone most of the early part of the evening. At 9:30 the Sheridans left.

Traffic had slowed down considerably, and the night lay dark and silently about Shadwell. Finally Randolph went out to the garage and got out his car and Ranny waited until the little red light had disappeared down the highway before he followed in his coupe. The only thing he must do was to make certain that the police were not following Knox. Ranny speeded up to keep the tail light of the other car within seeing distance. A while later he dropped back until he could find it only infrequently, as they turned corners and climbed hills.

At five until 11, Ranny drew his car off the highway, about a mile from the Duck Point Junction. He knew that he must not go any closer, or the negotiations might not be made tonight. Taylor had kept the police from interfering with this plan, by simply not telling them the contents of the message.

Ranny watched the highway, but at this late hour nothing but trucks of produce were passing, excepting for an occasional car of tourists. It was not a place for loitering, and was usually deserted about this time at night.

Knox Randolph slowed down at the junction. He saw no waiting car, nor did he expect to see one. He presumed that he was supposed to arrive last, and carefully slid his car into the dust of the road they had travelled to find the plane in the field. He dimmed the light and drew off into the tall grass at the side of the road. He sat quietly in the car waiting for some kind of instructions, or light from the car he knew must be down in the shadows of the moss-covered trees by the creek.

He sat there impatiently for about 15 minutes. There was no sign of life in the dark blur of the trees. The moon was hidden tonight by clouds that passed fitfully across it. Randolph knew that he would have to restrain himself or he would throttle the man.

Suddenly a car started up down by the willows. He could see it coming toward his own. The driver flashed his lights fully into his eyes, blinding him with its glare. As it seemed him, he felt the thrill of something against the side of his car and knew that it was something containing the note of instructions. The car swerved rapidly onto the highway and sped down the ribbon of concrete, which was now visible in the moonlight showing through a rift in the clouds.

Randolph opened his door and played a flashlight on the ground. The thing that had fallen was a small box tied up securely. He opened it with shaking hands, and in the dim light saw two notes. One was in Tamar's handwriting.

Dining Car Of Future

Will Be Double-Decker If Present Plans Carried Out

New York may not find its double-decked buses economical, but the railroads are finding this principle quite advantageous in not only sleepers, but the dining car of the future is very likely to be a "double-decker" if present plans proceed as scheduled.

The Budd Manufacturing Company is now working on such a car designed by Reuben H. Horton. In this car, space at each end, over the wheels, is slightly raised and in only single-decked. But the greater part of the car length, "amidships," is underhung, with the lower deck clearing the rails, and this is surmounted by an upper deck. The kitchen and storage space, which now occupy a large part of one end of the car is placed entirely on the lower deck, leaving the entire length of the car free for tables or counters where patrons may eat. Service becomes vertical, through a dumb waiter, instead of horizontal and entirely in the hands of assisting waiters, as is now the case. Christian Science Monitor.

Britain Recognizes Importance Of Small Shopkeepers In Commerce

One of the unusual heroes of Great Britain's war effort is the little fellow with a shop who has tried to keep his business going. The call for fighting men and war workers has drained out half of the pre-war personnel of 1,300,000 in non-food retail trades. Demand for raw materials has cut heavily into the volume of goods available for sale. The Liable Act of 1941 has helped ameliorate the lot of those caught in the jam. A report in Bulletin from Britain explains how it works.

A small shopkeeper faced with financial liabilities on account of the pressures of war can apply to the Liabilities Adjustment Officer in his district for "advice and assistance in enabling him to arrive at an equitable and reasonable scheme of arrangement with his creditors and, in particular, at such a scheme of arrangement as will enable him to preserve that business or to recover it when circumstances permit." Courts will enable him to postpone the payment of debts for such periods as they think fit and will exempt from seizure premises and other property that may be necessary to carry on the business. If a court decides to permit a debtor to remain in possession of leased premises it may reduce his rent to its "current lettable value." It can reduce the rate of interest on mortgage loans or postpone payment. The small shopkeeper has long been an important cog in the machinery of British commerce.—New York Sun.

New Supply Line

Surveyors Map Out Line From India To China

Tolling over some of the most difficult terrain in the world, two groups of hardy surveyors are mapping a new supply line from India to China which the Chinese hope may be in operation before the end of the year.

The new route, planned to replace the Burma road closed by the Japanese, will run from northeast India to Sikiang, about 300 miles southwest of Chungking. Chinese sources said. The airline distance is 40 miles, but scores of miles will be added by the tortuous curves made necessary by lofty mountains.

It is believed the new supply line may be ready for service by Christmas, when a stream of bullock carts and motor vehicles will resume the freight handling, done by fast motor trucks on the Burma road.

SMILE AWHILE

"John is so conceited."

"Yes, on his last birthday he sent a telegram of congratulations to his mother!"

"I wonder if I'll lose my looks when I'm as old as you."

"You'll be lucky if you do, dear."

"I understand married men make the best commercial travellers."

"That's right. Probably because they're so used to taking orders."

"Mr. Henpeck, what do you think of a man who carries every penny he gets?"

"My father loses money on everything my brother makes."

"What does your brother make?"

"Mistakes."

The teacher had asked the class to write an essay on "Our Dog." Young Jimmy was the first to finish. His effort read: "Our Dog. We haven't got one."

"Are you engaged to Harold?"

"Yes. I have promised to marry him as soon as he has made his fortune."

"That isn't an engagement, that's an option!"

Bobby was in a store with his mother when he was given candy by one of the clerks.

"What must you say, Bobby?"

"Charge it," he replied.

"You're lucky to have got hold of a cook in these times," said Mrs. Robinson.

"I don't know about the luck," replied her friend. "She seems to have the scorched earth policy on her brain."

Plumber—"Sorry, sir, I've forgotten my tools."

Professor—"That's all right, my good man, I've forgotten what I wanted you for."

He: "I'm thinking of getting married; what do you think of it?"

"She: 'I think it's a wonderful idea if you ask me.'"

Other Fish Available

Even If Canadians Cannot Have Canned Herring And Salmon

Because Britain's food needs are so great Canada's housewives aren't going to get any canned salmon or canned herring from the Dominion's 1942 packs but there'll be other good Canadian canned fish for them—for example, chicken haddie—and that gives added interest to the new method of processing. "Ice-land pack," which has been receiving attention from some canners. Canned chicken haddie combines the good qualities of three fine sea fish, haddock, cod and hake, for it is defined under the Meat and Canned Foods Act as a combination of all three, but advantages claimed for the "Ice-land pack" method of preparation are that it results in lessened flaking of the fish and that consequently the product is of especially attractive appearance and lends itself to an increased variety of uses. Consumers in the United Kingdom, by the way, are said to regard "Ice-land pack" fish as particularly acceptable.

On the other hand, however, "Ice-land pack" production is somewhat more costly than production by means of the ordinary method of putting up chicken haddie, and that may mean a higher price to the consumer. The greater cost in production is largely due to the fact that more new material is required to produce, say, 100 pounds of "Ice-land pack" than would be needed to produce a hundred-pounds of chicken haddie prepared in the usual way.—Brandon Sun.

Protection Not Good

Japan Has Very Few Anti-Aircraft Guns Or Shelters

There is no adequate protection against air raids anywhere in Japan. When I left Tokyo, just over a year ago, says Wilfred Fletcher, there were only a few anti-aircraft guns in the parks of the capital and in the open plaza in front of the imperial palace, where they were concealed in clumps of bushes. Only a couple of air-raid shelters, capable of accommodating only about 50 persons each, had been built in a city with a population of 7,000,000, while the Tokyo subway—newly inaugurated—was built so close to the surface of the ground that it could offer no safe refuge except against shrapnel from Japanese anti-aircraft guns. There is only one subway line across town, and it is evident what panic would develop if the electric power station were struck and put out of commission.

The Japanese people have long been drilled in air-raid protection methods and so-called "air-raid manoeuvres" have been held for upwards of 10 years past. These drills were started as far back as 1932, shortly after the Japanese invasion of Manchuria when Japanese military leaders feared the possibility of Chinese air raids from bases which were then not far removed. Why the Chinese did not bomb Japan at that time will always remain a mystery to me.

A WORTH-WHILE TIP

To make linoleum look polished without hard work wash it with rich, grease-dissolving soda to which a large tablespoon or more of floor polish has been added. The linoleum will not be slippery to walk on, but it will be shiny; even old floor-covering is happy with this treatment.

Synthetic rubber thread has been developed which will go into harnesses, parachutes, gas masks and respirators.

Germ Warfare

Japs Said To Have Spread Bubonic Germs In China

Japan has waged "germ warfare" against China for the last six months, Robert Barnett, United China Relief representative, said.

Barnett, who has returned to New York from a flying trip to China, said he had in his files "documentary proof" given him by Chinese health authorities that bubonic germs had been spread by the Japanese "frequently in the last six months," particularly in Hunan and Chekiang provinces.

Though some deaths resulted, Barnett said, there were no widespread epidemics.

HOME SERVICE

LIVING SCENERY ON VIEW IN A TERRARIUM

"Lakeside" Bottom Is A Cake Pan

A living miniature of your favorite view in glass—hills, lakes, trees and flowers!

You can make such a terrarium easily, with a cake pan and electrician's tape, or you may use a shallow box. Your hills and valleys are handy soil covered with green moss, your trees are tiny spruce seedlings and budding twigs of forsythia.

In the humid atmosphere of a terrarium the forsythia flowers quickly and lasts for weeks.

To make the beautiful lake with its winding rill, fill a cake pan with water and fit it at the bottom of the terrarium. Over it place a sheet of tin, as our sketch shows, from which a "lake shape" was cut with an old pair of scissors.

You may also make desert scenes, using cacti and sedums, and place a tiny donkey and miniature of pottery in their midst. Many lovely glass gardens—in jugs and jars—grow a single plant to perfection, a begonia, orchid, gardenia.

Our 32-page booklet shows how to make all kinds of terrariums, grow pine and palm, cactus and orchid, African violet, begonia, croton and many more flowering and foliage plants. Also has directions for dish gardens.

Send 15c in coin for your copy of "Glass Gardens and Novelty Indoor Gardens" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermott Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

The July meeting of the W.M.S. will be held July 16 at the home of Mrs. Lee Currie, north of Irma. These meetings are open to everyone interested and a cordial welcome awaits you.

During the past week forty-five girls have been having their annual outing at Camp Lake north of Kinsella under the auspices of the United Church. On Thursday of this week the girls will come home and the boys will then take their turn.

Early Tuesday morning a severe electrical storm passed over the southern part of the Irma district. According to rain gauges 45 of an inch of rain fell in a short time. Again early Wednesday morning .69 of an inch of rain fell in Irma. On account of this rain the A.F.U. sports were postponed to Friday, July 10.

Now that we have moisture enough to bring the crops along and we are getting some real hot days you should not delay in placing your hail insurance with E. W. Carter. Better be safe than sorry.

YOUR SCRAP METAL URGENTLY NEEDED!

This New Method makes Scrap Metal Collection easy for you.

More scrap steel and iron is urgently needed for more ships, tanks, planes, guns and munitions. You are asked to do your part by turning in every available ounce of scrap metal from your farm.

In order to facilitate the systematic collection of scrap iron and steel in the three Prairie Provinces, the Wartime Salvage Limited, a Government Company, has completed arrangements with the following Western Canadian Elevators for collection and purchase of scrap iron and steel:

Alberta Wheat Pool. Saskatchewan Pool Elevators.
Manitoba Pool Elevators Ltd. United Grain Growers Limited.
North-West Line Elevator Association.

These Companies handle and purchase this material on behalf of the Government without cost to the Government, and without profit to themselves. Any monies received over and above the actual cost of handling will be donated to War Charities.

An Agent of one of the above named Elevator Companies has been appointed in your district as an official buyer on behalf of the Wartime Salvage Limited. The prices to be paid by these Agents has been fixed by the Department of Munitions & Supply at $7.00 per net ton at the elevator, for all forms of scrap iron and steel including: (a) Sheet tin of any kind; (b) Automobile bodies and fenders; (c) Stovepipes; and (d) Wooden attachments.

This price applies at any designated point in the Prairie Provinces.

Your contribution to the war effort and to war charities is simplified by this arrangement and it will be more effective inasmuch as you now can take your scrap metal to the Elevator designated in your district and obtain a receipt for it from the Agent.

Should you desire to donate your scrap to the war effort, then such receipt voucher can be endorsed by you, payable to the Voluntary Salvage Committee in your community. The Voluntary Salvage Committee will use such money for war charitable purposes.

Your contribution of scrap iron and steel is urgently needed NOW. Dig out every available ounce of scrap on your farm and take it to the Elevator Agent nearest you without delay. Canadian war industry needs it badly.

A bonus of 8c per pound butter fat delivered at the creamery went into effect on Monday, according to reports. Just what preparations have been made by the federal government to pay this bonus are a little vague as we go to press and we can't say that this announcement is authoritative but we understand that it has been announced in the daily press and over some radio stations.
